A close-up photograph of a tarantula hawk wasp, characterized by its long, segmented body and transparent wings, as it lays its eggs into the abdomen of a large, hairy tarantula spider. The spider is positioned on a light-colored, sandy surface with some dry twigs and leaves scattered around. The wasp's legs are visible as it penetrates the spider's body. The text is overlaid on the image in a bold, red and blue font.

READING SOMETHING, BEING
INSPIRED BY IT, AND THEN
CREATING ART IN RESPONSE, IS A
SORT OF METAPHYSICAL PSYCHIC
PARASITISM. LIKE A TARANTULA
HAWK WASP LAYING IT'S EGGS IN
THE CORPSE OF A LIVE SPIDER.
FRANKLY PERVERTED BEHAVIOUR
